

Associate Professor of Communication

The Department of Communication at Wayne State University invites applications for two tenure-track Associate Professors with specific research interests from among the following: intercultural communication and diversity, social influence and persuasion; organizational and institutional communication. Applicants with interests that intersect more than one of these areas are of particular interest.

Applicants must have a Ph.D. and an active program of scholarship and service as well as a strong record of teaching, and interest in both undergraduate and graduate (M.A. and Ph.D.) education. The successful candidates should also demonstrate an interest in securing external funding.

As part of a University-wide program of excellence in graduate education, Wayne State University's Department of Communication was selected through a highly competitive process to attract scholars with a distinguished research agenda. The successful candidate will also have the opportunity to direct an annual Doctoral Honors Seminar. For further information about the Department of Communication at Wayne State University, please visit our website at <http://www.comm.wayne.edu>

Applications should be made through the Wayne State University Online Hiring System at <http://jobs.wayne.edu> referring to posting number 034358. Applications should include a letter of application, curriculum vita, names and contact information for three references; and professional/academic writing. A statement of teaching philosophy and evidence of teaching effectiveness may be forwarded to:

Dr. Loraleigh Keashly
Search Committee Chair
Wayne State University
Department of Communication
585 Manoogian Hall
Detroit, Michigan 48201

Review of applications will begin October 31, 2007 and will continue until the position is filled. Wayne State University faculty will be available to meet with interested candidates for this position at the National Communication Association Convention. The Department of Communication is committed to building a diverse faculty and educating a diverse student population. We encourage candidates who can serve well in a dynamic multicultural urban environment.

Wayne State University is an Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer. Women and minority applicants are encouraged to apply.

Associate Professor of Communication

The Department of Communication at Wayne State University invites applications for two tenure-track Associate Professors with specific research interests from among the following: intercultural communication and diversity, social influence and persuasion; organizational and institutional communication. Applicants with interests that intersect more than one of these areas are of particular interest.

Applicants must have a Ph.D. and an active program of scholarship and service as well as a strong record of teaching, and interest in both undergraduate and graduate (M.A. and Ph.D.) education. The successful candidates should also demonstrate an interest in securing external funding.

As part of a University-wide program of excellence in graduate education, Wayne State University's Department of Communication was selected through a highly competitive process to attract scholars with a distinguished research agenda. The successful candidate will also have the opportunity to direct an annual Doctoral Honors Seminar. For further information about the Department of Communication at Wayne State University, please visit our website at <http://www.comm.wayne.edu>

Applications should be made through the Wayne State University Online Hiring System at <http://jobs.wayne.edu> referring to posting number 034356. Applications should include a letter of application, curriculum vita, names and contact information for three references; and professional/academic writing. A statement of teaching philosophy and evidence of teaching effectiveness may be forwarded to:

Dr. Loraleigh Keashly
Search Committee Chair
Wayne State University
Department of Communication
585 Manoogian Hall
Detroit, Michigan 48201

Review of applications will begin October 31, 2007 and will continue until the position is filled. Wayne State University faculty will be available to meet with interested candidates for this position at the National Communication Association Convention. The Department of Communication is committed to building a diverse faculty and educating a diverse student population. We encourage candidates who can serve well in a dynamic multicultural urban environment.

Wayne State University is an Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer. Women and minority applicants are encouraged to apply.

Assistant Professor of Journalism

The Department of Communication at Wayne State University seeks candidates for a tenure-track Assistant Professor position. The Department invites applicants who hold a Ph.D or J.D. and who have quality professional experience in Broadcast Journalism. Candidates should have an established record in college or university teaching and an appropriate program of scholarship and/or professional publications.

The successful candidate will engage in a program of scholarship, teach and advise students at the undergraduate and Masters' levels, and participate in appropriate departmental, college and university service activities.

Applicants are made through the Wayne State University Online Hiring System at <http://jobs.wayne.edu> referring to posting number 034359. Applicants should include a letter of application (all candidates who are ABD should expect completion before July 15, 2007), curriculum vita, names and contact information for three references and, samples of professional/academic writings. A statement of teaching philosophy and evidence of teaching effectiveness may be forwarded to:

Professor Ben Burns
Journalism Search Committee Chair
Wayne State University
Department of Communication
585 Manoogian Hall
Detroit, Michigan 48201

Review of applications will begin October 8, 2007 and continue until the position is filled. For further information about the Department of Communication at Wayne State University, please visit our website at <http://www.comm.wayne.edu>

The Department of Communication is committed to building a diverse faculty and educating a diverse student population. We encourage candidates who can serve well in a dynamic multicultural urban environment.

Wayne State University is an Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer. Women and minority applicants are encouraged to apply.