The Department of Sociology, Anthropology, and Crime and Justice Studies

Department Policy Against Racism
Adopted 2010

The Department of Sociology, Anthropology, and Crime and Justice Studies will not tolerate acts of racism by students. When faculty members are targets of racism we will support them and hold students accountable.

The department has established the following procedures to address racism.

The faculty member may take actions they deem necessary and in compliance with University policies and procedures to respond to students’ racist conduct, including having the student withdraw from the class. The faculty member may also report the matter to the Committee Against Racism with the faculty member’s recommendations for resolution. The Committee Against Racism will support the faculty member and submit the recommendations to the department Chair. If the matter is not resolved it will be referred to the appropriate University officials.
