

Nicholas Kazanas was born in Greece in 1939. He studied English Literature at University College, Economics and Philosophy at the School of Economic Science and Sanskrit at the School of Oriental and African studies – all in London; also post-graduate at SOAS and at Deccan College in Pune (India). Dr Kazanas taught in London and Athens and since 1980 has been Director of Omilos Meleton Cultural Institute. In Greece he has published treatises of social, economic and philosophical interest. He has many publications in Western and Indian Journals and some books. He is on the Editorial Board of Adyar Library Buletin (Chennai). He has participated in many international conferences in London, in the USA and in India. He has produced a three-year course of learning Sanskrit for Greeks. He has also translated the ten principal Upanishads (ĪŚĀ, KENA, KAṬHA, MĀṆḌUKYA, BrHADĀRANYAKA, etc) from the original Sanskrit text into Greek. From 1997 he has turned towards the Vedic Tradition of India and its place in the wider Indo-European culture. His latest publications are Indoaryan Origins and Other Vedic Issues 2009 and Economic Principles in the Vedic Tradition 2010, Delhi, Aditya Prakashan. Currently he is coordinating the Vedic Venues : Journal of the Continuity of Vedic Culture which is expected to be launched in December 2011..