

The UMass Dartmouth
Ferreira-Mendes Portuguese-American Archives and the Center for Portuguese Studies and Culture
proudly present

A talk by Dr. Miguel Moniz

FLAD/Brown Visiting Professor In Portuguese Studies at Brown University

Eula Mendes: Portuguese plant labor activism and the criminalization of protest

Thursday, January 30, 2020
11am–12:30pm

UMass Dartmouth Main Campus
Ferreira-Mendes Portuguese-American Archives
Park In Lot 13

For further information,
508-910-6888
prium@umassd.edu

Miguel Moniz is a researcher at the Center for Anthropological Research (CRIA) at ISCTE-Instituto Universitário de Lisboa. Moniz studies racialization and ethnic group formation. He examines the histories of migrant mobility, settlement, marginalization and efforts at civic inclusion among Portuguese-speaking diasporas with a focus on New England.

This talk looks at the life of Eulalia "Eula" Mendes, and other migrant labor leaders from Portugal and their early contribution to the American labor movement. The political marginalization and criminalization of migrant labor activism made Eula Mendes a key figure in—and ultimately a martyr of—the fight for not only workers, but also for migrant civic rights.

FOI PRESA ONTEM EULALIA MENDES, SECRETARIA DA TEXTILE WORKERS UNION

A União prepara uma grande recepção a Fred Beal, que chega hoje a esta cidade

Outro, pouco maior da 1 hora de fundo, quando desceram permitiu um grupo de operários da rádio Manaus, que regressaram ao trabalho depois da hora de descanso, Mário G. Mendes, de 18 anos, N. Acácias Arcoverde, servente da United Textile Workers Union, do povo para o governo, pelo policial Patrick J. McNamara e comandado à estrutura central da polícia, todo mal intencionado.

Mais Mendes falava a um grupo de cerca de 40 operários, em sua fábrica de São Paulo, quando o delegado da polícia Municipal, Mário Góis, e a sua equipe que se achava lá, entraram e o deslocaram para a glorieta, onde imediatamente o prendeu.

 UMass | Dartmouth

CONTINUUM A